

The three friends reached the island. They played, they swam, they fished, they went treasure-hunting, they slept... and then they began all over again.

Suddenly, in the midst of their endless fun, they heard voices from the shore, and saw several small boats coming closer.

-They're probably looking for someone, Tom said, and in a flash the three boys realized the boats were looking for them. They'd been playing pirates so intently that a whole day had gone by, without them noticing. Quickly, they jumped aboard their raft and rowed home.